3.4 Distribution Systems

- Explain in detail your distribution channels, both in the domestic market and in export markets. Include a flow chart.

All distribution of milk powder is managed through Sales and Marketing team of the Ingredients Division

- Indicate the determination of prices, the terms of sale if they differ by type of client and/or by market. Explain the reasons for this differentiation. In general terms, indicate the terms of sale by type of customer and by market.

U.S. sales prices are generally priced based off publicly available indices and markets that reflect supply and demand conditions.

For nonfat dry milk (NDM) and skim milk powder (SMP), the sales price is almost always directly linked to prices on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME), the National Dairy Products Sales Report (NDPSR) or the Global Dairy Trade auction (GDT). The CME has both a spot NDM market (product sold for immediate delivery) and a derivatives market with futures and options for NDM (for future delivery up to 24 months). Both the spot and the derivatives market have more than sufficient liquidity (the level of trading activity) to accurately reflect market pricing for NDM. This accuracy in pricing is further demonstrated by the CME's near perfect correlation with the NDPSR, which is a mandatory weekly survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture of the price and volume of NDM sales conducted during that period.

The GDT is a public auction of a basket of dairy products that is held every 2 weeks for physical delivery over the following 6 months, where the results are published at the conclusion of the event. The auction has representation from all key dairy exporting regions and provides a demand driven pricing index for global dairy export.

Effectively, with the CME, NDPSR and the GDT, there is clear publicly available price transparency that accurately reflects supply and demand conditions for NDM and/or SMP, which in turn establishes a base price for all other sales contracts.

With the NDM price as a base, prices for individual sales will vary from sale to sale for several reasons, including:

- Product specifications. Price can differ for various specifications as the different specifications will have different costs of production – e.g. High Heat Low Spore SMP v. Low Heat Extra Grade NDM.
 - Delivery periods. The cost of manufacturing the product will change month-to-month as the supply and demand of raw milk availability moves, as reflected by the derivatives market, which in turn will affect the final sale price of the product resulting in different prices for different delivery periods.
 - Freight costs. Freight costs fluctuate every day and vary widely by destination and method of transport. These costs are either borne directly by the importer or incorporated into the final sale price.
 - Contract terms. The specifics of a sales contract can vary from customer to customer on a range of issues, including whether the sale is for a fixed price or indexed off the CME or NDPSR, if there is payment risk, and what type of payment or credit terms are offered to the customer.
- Describe your company's discount policy (quantity, volume, etc.) for domestic and export sales.

Discounts are not typically part of domestic or export sales.

- If you use price lists, please attach those that were in force during the period of investigation.

Price lists are not utilized and product pricing of commodities will fluctuate on a daily basis.

4. PRODUCT BEING INVESTIGATED

4.1 Describe the technical characteristics of the product manufactured by your company that is the subject of investigation for alleged subsidies, both for the domestic market and for export to Colombia. Include an explanation of the differences and similarities between them (references, uses, physical and chemical characteristics, presentations, etc.).

Milk powder sold for domestic use is also sold internationally and is regulated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Milk powder sold domestically will meet the Code of Federal Regulations (21CFR131.125) and will be called nonfat dry milk (NDM). Milk powder sold internationally, including to Colombia, could be called NDM or skim milk powder (SMP) and follow the international compositional guidance of the Codex. The difference between the two standards is that the international standard specifies a protein content and allows for adjustment of the milk composition to meet this protein content. In many milk-producing countries, including the U.S., the protein level in raw milk will be slightly higher and milk protein will be standardized by adding milk permeate or lactose to offer a consistent milk powder with 34% protein in MSNF as specified in Codex. The fat and moisture levels of the domestic and international powders are similar.

U.S. spray dried NDM and SMP are typically used for its functional and nutritional properties in food and beverage formulations. The product characteristics include good water absorption and binding, solubility, emulsification, and dispersibility.

Milk powder can be used in a variety of applications from dairy products such as yogurt, cheese, ice cream, milk and beverages, to sweetened condensed milk, confectionery and bakery products, processed foods, and dry blended products. It can also be used in foods and formula for babies.

Milk powder selection is typically done according to how it will be used – taking into consideration the needs of the final product and the rigor of the processing to obtain the finished product.

Consideration will be given to the heat classification of the product. Low-heat, Medium-heat and high-heat milk powders are made in the U.S. The classification refers to the amount of heat the milk receives during processing which correlates to the denaturation of the whey proteins and functionality of the product. The whey protein nitrogen index (WPNI) is used to classify the powders. To be classified as low-heat, a powder should have a WPNI of not less than 6 mg/g. A high-heat powder will have a WPNI of less than 1.5 mg/g. The WPNI of a medium-heat powder will be in the 1.51–5.99 mg/g range.

4.2 Attach catalogs and/or technical sheets corresponding to the product under investigation, containing the technical characteristics indicated in point 4.1.

Product technical sheets are CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION and is not to be disclosed.

Attached are the product technical sheets that pertain to product that is shipped to Colombia, which includes all parameters that are required by the government for the importation of milk powder:

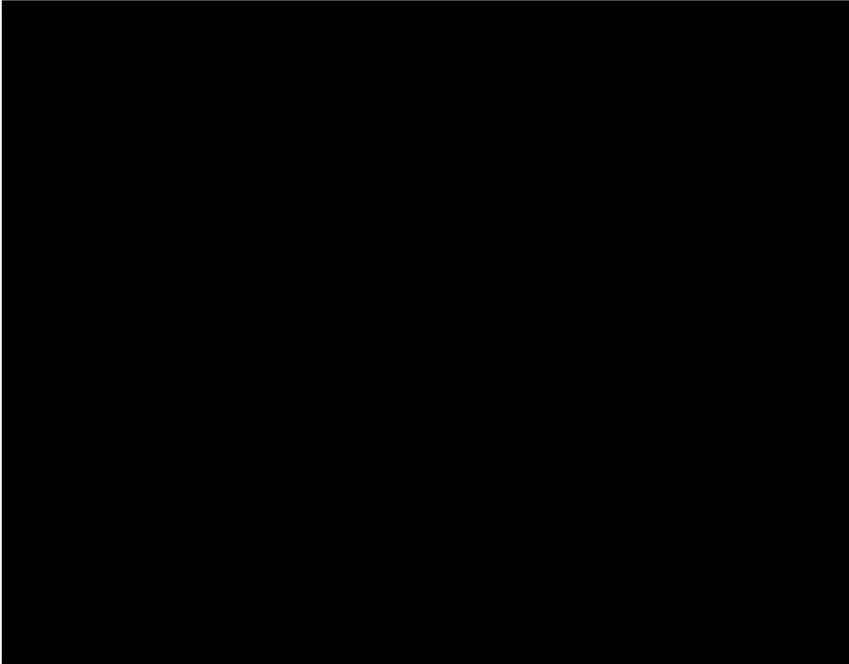

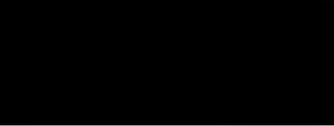

Description

Spray dried Low Heat Nonfat Dry Milk is the powder resulting from the removal of the fat and water from fresh milk. It shall contain the lactose, milk proteins and milk minerals in the same relative proportions as they occur in fresh milk. The product shall be made from fresh, sweet milk to which no preservative, alkali, neutralizing agent or other chemical has been added and which has been pasteurized.

Ingredient	Allergen Statement	Regulatory Reference
Milk	Contains milk	21 CFR 131.125

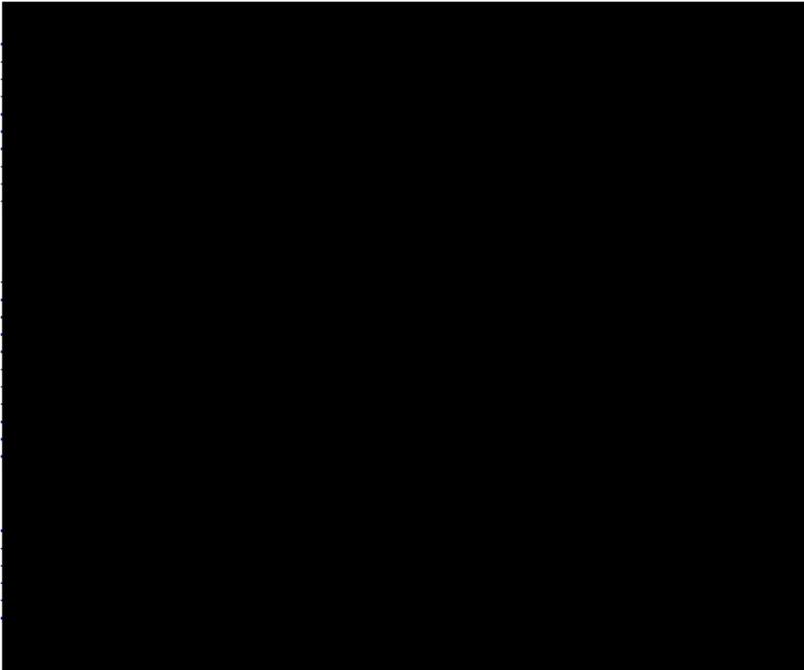

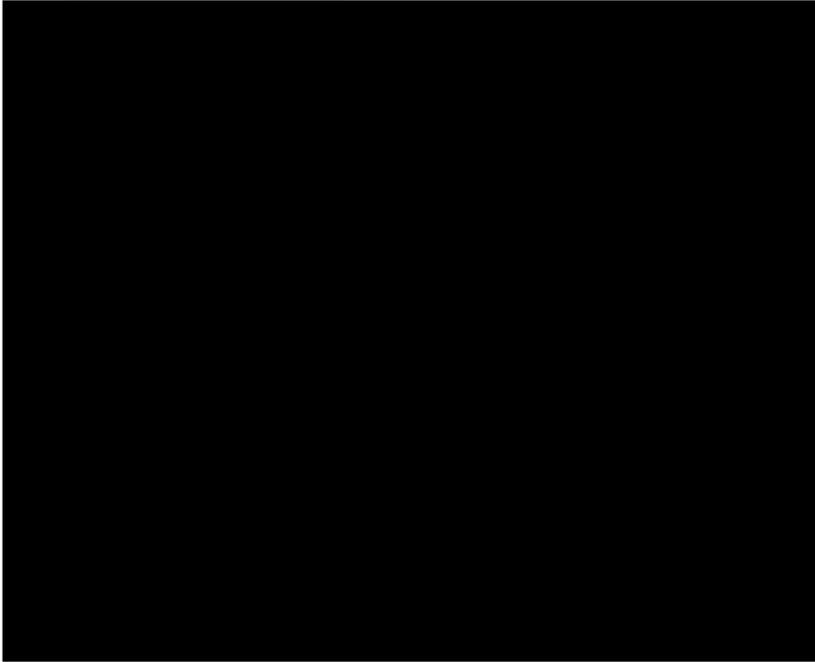

Description

Spray dried LH SMP is the powder resulting from the removal of the fat and water from fresh milk from cows. The product shall be made from fresh, sweet milk to which no preservative, alkali, neutralizing agent or other chemical has been added and which has been pasteurized. Milk proteins, milk permeate, or lactose may be added to standardize protein concentration.

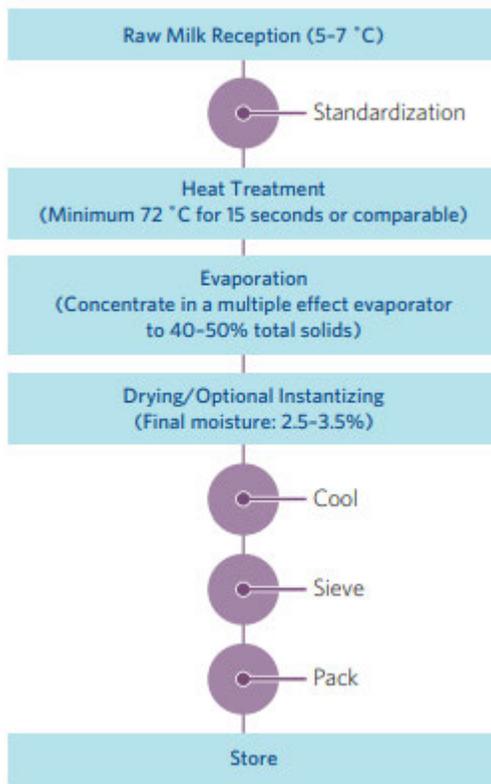

Ingredient	Allergen Statement	Regulatory Reference
Milk	Contains milk	Codex Standard 207-1999

4.3 Describe the production processes of the product or products being investigated.

Basic Milk Powder Production

A basic production process could be described as follow:

1) Milk is received at the processing plant and kept refrigerated until use.

2) Milk is then pasteurized, milk enters the pasteurizer unit where it is heated, held at the desired temperature for a set time and then cooled.

3) Milk composition is adjusted, for NDM the fat component of the milk will be removed by a centrifugal separator. For SMP (Codex Standard), the fat will be removed and the protein level can be adjusted by adding lactose or milk permeate to reach a standardized protein level.

4) The pasteurized milk will then go through a concentration process to increase its total solid concentration to typically 50% total solids. The milk will pass through the multiple stages of the evaporation unit which operates under vacuum, to remove water from the milk until it reaches a high solids content.

- 5) The evaporated milk will then be sprayed into the hot air in the dryer unit to complete the water removal and yield milk powder with at least 95% total solids.
- 6) Once dried, the milk powder will be cooled, sifted and packaged.
- 7) The type and size of packaging may vary. For domestic use 1-ton totes can be used, but more frequently 50lbs bag (heat sealed polyethylene liner inside and break away kraft paper outer bag) are preferred. For export, typically the 25kg bag are used and preferred for their ease of handling.
- 8) The product is put on pallets and placed in the warehouse until shipping.

4.4 Indicate the technical standards that are met by products under investigation that are exported to Colombia and to other countries. Attach the certificates of compliance with the corresponding standards.

In the U.S., Nonfat dry milk (NDM), as defined by the Code of Federal Regulations (21CFR131.125) (See attachment submitted by U.S. Dairy Export Council), is obtained by removing water from pasteurized skimmed milk. It contains 5% or less moisture (by weight) and 1.5% or less milkfat (by weight) unless otherwise indicated.

The USDA Agricultural Marketing Service Dairy Programs offers grading for Nonfat Dry Milk (Spray Process). The standards are based on input and analysis of processor and user needs for product quality and functionality to ensure a nationally and internationally understood language for efficient, orderly trade.

Grades of Nonfat Dry Milk (Spray Process) (See attachment submitted by U.S. Dairy Export Council)

- 1. U.S. Extra Grade nonfat dry milk shall conform to the following requirements:
 - a) Flavor. Reconstituted nonfat dry milk shall possess a sweet, pleasing, and desirable flavor, but may possess the following flavors to a slight degree: Chalky, cooked, feed, or flat.
 - b) Physical appearance. Nonfat dry milk shall possess a uniform white to light cream natural color. It shall be free from lumps, except those that readily break up with slight pressure, and be practically free from visible dark particles. The reconstituted product shall be free from graininess.
 - c) Bacterial estimate. Not more than 10,000 per gram standard plate count.
 - d) Milkfat content. Not more than 1.25 percent.
 - e) Moisture content. Not more than 4.0 percent.

 - g) Solubility index. Not more than 1.2 ml., except that product classified as U.S. High-heat may have not more than 2.0 ml.
 - h) Titratable acidity. Not more than 0.15 percent (lactic acid).

- 2. U.S. Standard Grade nonfat dry milk shall conform to the following requirements:
 - a) Flavor. Reconstituted nonfat dry milk shall possess a fairly pleasing flavor, but may possess the following flavors to a slight degree: Bitter, oxidized, scorched, storage, or utensil; the following to a definite degree: Chalky, cooked, feed, or flat.
 - b) Physical appearance. Nonfat dry milk may possess a slight unnatural color. It shall be free from lumps, except those that break readily under moderate pressure, and be reasonably free from visible dark particles. The reconstituted product shall be reasonably free from graininess.
 - c) Bacterial estimate. Not more than 75,000 per gram standard plate count.
 - d) Milkfat content. Not more than 1.50 percent.
 - e) Moisture content. Not more than 5.0 percent.
 - f) Scorched particle content. Not more than 22.5 mg.
 - g) Solubility index. Not more than 2.0 ml., except that product classified as U.S. High-heat may have not more than 2.5 ml.
 - h) Titratable acidity. Not more than 0.17 percent (lactic acid).

The international Codex Alimentarius standard for milk powders and cream powders (CXS 207-1999, (See attachment submitted by U.S. Dairy Export Council) describes milk powders and cream powder as milk products which can be obtained by the partial removal of water from milk or cream. The fat and/or protein content of the milk or cream may have been adjusted to comply with the compositional requirements of the standard, but the addition and/or withdrawal of milk constituents must have been done in such a way as not to alter the whey protein-to-casein ratio of the milk being adjusted. Milk retentate, milk permeate and lactose are allowed for protein adjustment purposes. The Codex Alimentarius standard sets compositional criteria for skimmed milk powder (SMP) which are: maximum milkfat: 1.5% m/m, maximum water: 5% m/m, minimum protein in milk solids nonfat: 34% m/m. It is noted that the water content does not include water of crystallization of the lactose; the milk solids-not-fat content includes water of crystallization of the lactose.

4.5 Specify the conversion factor necessary to put the merchandise on the same basis of comparison, if it is sold on the foreign market in different quantities and units than as sold in Colombia.

4.16 Describe how your company determines the sales prices of milk powder in the domestic market and in the Colombian market.

The sales price of U.S. milk powder is generally based off publicly available indices (e.g. CME, NDPSR) that reflect supply and demand conditions in the milk powder market. Different product specifications, delivery periods, contract terms, freight costs, and packaging types would also impact the final sales price. See question 3.4 for more detail.

4.17 Provide information on your sales prices for milk powder for each of the sales transactions carried out in your domestic market and in your exports to Colombia and to third party countries during the year 2023. Use the formats in Tables 4, 5 and 6.

All attached invoices are confidential

4.19 Indicate if the milk powder and/or liquid milk exported to Colombia or other countries has any difference (physical, use, etc.) from that sold in your domestic market. If your answer is affirmative, explain these differences in detail.

The milk powder exported to Colombia and other countries by our firm does not differ from that sold domestically and we do not export liquid milk to Colombia.

4.20 Explain what factors, in your opinion, have influenced the behavior of the domestic price of milk powder and/or liquid milk produced in the United States, as well as the export price of milk powder originating from that country, during the period January – December 2023.

From our cooperative perspective, the domestic price of milk powder produced in the United States, as well as the export price of milk powder, has been impacted by market forces driven by the factors noted in the response to 3.4 above. The impact that the global pandemic had on global supply and demand, as well as the effects of climate change on milk production cannot be ruled out as factors in affecting pricing during the period of January – December 2023.

4.21 Indicate the percentage that the sales income from the investigated product represented in the total value of your company's sales in the investigation period established

As noted in the export data provided, this export to Colombia is a small portion of our business, representing 1%.

4.22 Attach the Production Cost Statement and Income Statement corresponding to the product under investigation, presented at the highest level of detail possible, explaining the methodology used for the allocation of costs and expenses. The figures must refer to the sales made during the investigation period, between the years 2020 and 2023. Tables 7, 8 and 9.

The information requested is proprietary to California Dairies, Inc. dba DairyAmerica and we are unable to disclose.
